

ON THIS DAY IN 1930

Gandhi and company set off on the Salt March

The British enjoyed a longstanding lucrative monopoly on salt in India. Only they were permitted to produce or sell it, while the people of India, many of whom couldn't afford it, were expected to buy it back at exorbitant rates. In a profound act of nonviolent civil disobedience, Mahatma Gandhi led a 240-mile Salt March across western India. When he reached the coast, Gandhi illegally collected salt from the ocean. The march was
